PAN has a numismatic MacMoment on August 3rd. To celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Big Mac, McDonald's unveiled the MacCoin, a limited edition global currency. The promotion Began at lunch time on August 2nd. Customers were able to receive a MacCoin with the purchase of a Big Mac at 14,000 participating restaurants across the U.S., while supplies lasted. Starting on August 3rd through 2018, customers can redeem their MacCoin for a free Big Mac at participating McDonald's restaurants in the U.S. and in more than 50 participating countries.

More than 6.2 million MacCoins were distributed globally in more than 50 countries while supplies lasted. These good for tokens feature five unique designs, each representing a decade of the Big Mac. Each MacCoin design pulls in elements from that time in history, nodding to art, music and pop culture, while the front-side of the MacCoin celebrates the 50th anniversary of the Big Mac. The '70s showcased the decade's flower power. The '80s alluded to pop art. The '90s defined with bold, abstract shapes. The early '00s specifically focused on the technology that was at the forefront of the turn of the century. The evolution of communication is the theme of the '10s decade.

The coin bug impulse hit at noon on August 4th with the purchase of a Big Mac at a McDonald's in Wilkesburg, Western Pennsylvania. Well that was easy so I purchased two more but only got one more design. I made an inquiry as to how the distribution of the five different types would be handled and was told that each location was provided 250 tokens of mixed designs. Now this posed a dilemma as to the most efficient and cost effective way to acquire all five designs. I knew that the Big Mac was conceived locally in Uniontown Pennsylvania and that there was actually a Big Mac museum at the McDonald's franchise in Irwin Pennsylvania only a few miles away. I introduced myself to the store manager and related the idea of a numismatic article with a few photos of his store. I asked if he could muster up all five varieties and he did but I was required to make five separated Big Mac purchases, which I did. The U.S Route 30 location was a pleasure to visit with all the information and history of the Big Mac.

James Delligatti thought up the concept for the Big Mac in 1965 and started serving it at his Uniontown McDonald's in April 1967 for 45 cents. By 1968, the Big Mac was on the menu of every American McDonald's, and in 1969, it accounted for 19% of total sales. The famous 1970s jingle tells us the burger contains: "two all-beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, pickles, onions on a sesame-seed bun."

 PAN welcomes the International Association of Silver Art Collectors

 Bid Live Now

 www.PANcoins.org

The PAN Fall Coin Show and Convention has been moved from our usual late October date to September 13 – 15. This was necessary due to the Whitman Baltimore Coin Expo moving from their usual November spot. We would have lost 34 dealers if we had not moved our date.

Unfortunately, our current date conflicts with the National Battlefield Show in Gettysburg. The good news is that some of the dealers are splitting and doing both PAN and Gettysburg. Our position is that both shows will do very well with minimal effect on each other.

Some of the PAN show highlights will be the lecture by Bob Evans Chief Scientist and Historian of the S.S. Central America. Bob is currently working on processing new discoveries from the Ship of Gold and will be able to share the latest finds with us.

Cindy Calhoun of Cindy's Cents will be rolling elongated cents with the S.S. Central America theme. Be sure to stop at her table for this cool give-a-way.

The International Association of Silver Art Collectors (IASAC) is having their gathering and convention at the PAN Show. We are delighted that they chose our show as a place to meet.

PAN is also having our very fine banquet on Thursday evening, a great lecture series on Friday, and wrapping up with our popular PANKidZone on Saturday.

That is what we are now doing on our PAN Facebook page. We have about six Pennsylvania Coin Clubs that have us consistently post their monthly meetings on our page. These notices are proving to be very popular. They receive quite a few likes and positive feedbacks from the 3,200+ people that follow us. If your coin club would like us to announce your meeting notices through this very popular social media tool then please email us your contact information and meeting date at pancoins@gmail.com

Give us your topic for the month and we will place a cool photo of the coin or subject matter to be presented. PAN would greatly appreciate it if you would in kind share our Coin Shows on your club page. This is a great platform to extend outreach to those that may not know about coin hobby information in their own area.

A Silver Half-penny of John Baliol

By E. Tomlinson Fort

A silver half-penny of John Baliol, King of Scots (1292-1296) struck at St. Andrews. The obverse reads IOHANNES DEI GRA while the reverse has the inscription CIVITA S ANDRE.

The origins of the town of St. Andrews are lost to history. In the eighth century Oengus I son of Fergus, king of the Picts (732-761), founded a monastery there to house some bones of St. Andrew that were brought to the town by St. Regulus. From this period onwards the town became one of the most important centres of Christianity in Scotland and an important place of pilgrimage that brought people from all over Europe.

In the reign of King David I (1124-1153) a mint was established in the town. Only one moneyer, Mainard, is known to have struck coins. Sadly the sources from the reign give no information as to whether or not the profits of this small mint (only about five examples are known today) went of the king or Bishop Robert of Scone (1124-1159).

No coins bearing a St. Andrews mint signature are known for the reigns of Malcolm IV (1153-1165), William I (1165-1214) or Alexander II (1214-1249). It is likely that mint activity ceased in the burgh during David I's lifetime or shortly afterwards.

Early in the reign of Alexander III (1249-1286) coins bearing a St. Andrews mint signature struck by the moneyer Thomas were struck. All of this issue appeared early in the reform of the coinage that began in 1250. However, like many of the small mints that appear during this phase of Alexander's 'long cross' coinage the mint seems to have ceased to function well before the king's next reform in 1280.

Two documentary sources, the Scotichronicon by Walter Bower and the Orygynale Cronykil of Scotland by Andrew of Winton written in the early 15th century, record King Alexander III granting minting rights at St. Andrews to Bishop William Fraser in 1283. Sadly, the grant has not survived. Equally, the coins struck by Alexander III during this period do not have a mint signature. It has been presumed that all of the coins during this period were struck at Berwick since the town was Scotland's largest and was the kingdom's chief centre of trade. If St. Andrews was active in the period between 1283 and 1292 there is no numismatic evidence to support it.

It is during the reign of John Baliol (1292-1296) that St. Andrews once again appears as a mint. This time both pennies and half pennies were produced there. All coins from this mint are rare, but the later coinage is especially so. Dating King John's coinage is fairly straight forward. During the inter-regnum that occurred after Alexander III's death in 1286 coinage seems to have continued to be produced in his name. Such a practice was not uncommon in mediaeval Europe. In the case of Scotland this is demonstrated by the obverses of King John and the reverses of Alexander III.

John Baliol received the title of king at Berwick on 17 November 1292 and was crowned at Scone on 30 November 1292. Presumably his coinage began sometime after these dates. Though how long it took to prepare the new dies is unknown. The coinage must have ended when Edward I captured and sacked Berwick on 30 March 1296.

Contemporary accounts of Berwick's fall put the number of civilian dead between 4,000 and 17,000. This must mean that any minting activity ceased by this date at the latest. The fate(s) of the mint workers and town officials are not recorded but they cannot have been pleasant. The town never again reached the economic standing that it had held in the 12th and 13th centuries. Therefore coinage in the name of King John was struck over a period of about three years and two months at most. The Scottish defeat at the Battle of Dunbar on 27 April 1296 effectively ended serious Scottish resistance. King John abdicated on 10 July 1296.

St. Andrews seems to have been bypassed by the English invasion forces. This is not surprising. While the town was an important ecclesiastical centre, it held no strategic importance. Bishop William Fraser (1279-1297) was a strong supporter of John Baliol and opposed Edward I's attempt to intervene in Scottish affairs. However, he was not present to either join King John or to rally the kingdom against the English at the time of

Regarding the history of the mint during this period Holmes and Stewartby argue that the mint seems to have begun coining in John Baliol's name after the principal mint at Berwick. Though it is impossible to know how much time passed, it is not likely to have been more than a month or two at most. The numismatic evidence suggests that that Berwick was the source of the dies used at St. Andrews. The punches used to make the letters are the same and the busts were crafted in the same style. Thus, the coinage from the town follows the lead of the much larger, and more important, mint to the south.

Baliol's coinage has been generally divided into two main issues: 'rough' and 'smooth'. The later issue was produced by dies with a more finely engraved portrait and a bolder letter font (especially the use of a chevron bar in the A. The earlier group is generally of much more coarser work than the later and many display a rough style of execution. This breakdown applies to coins produced at both Berwick and St. Andrews. Among the silver pence the early issues are more common than the later ones. However, among the half pennies the reverse is the case. The St. Andrews half penny illustrated here is from the later 'smooth' issue.

Baliol's St. Andrews issues are unique among the whole Scottish coinage in that they use the word 'civitas' on the reverse. While the term is very common on the coinage of Edward I and a number of his successors in England and Ireland, It never appears again on a Scottish coin.

<https://nnp.wustl.edu/library/book/545751>

Just in case you missed our past May Coin Show there is a video of U.S. Mint Senior Legal Counsel Greg Weinman's fascinating lecture about the 1933 Gold Double Eagles. The Newman Numismatic Portal provided the funding to have numismatic videographer David Lisot at the PAN show to record this rare lecture. The link above takes you to the NNP site where it is free to view by everyone. Greg was able to finally reveal more information since all the litigation involved with these coins has been exhausted. Some new revelations came to light concerning another 1933 gold piece. Greg stated that he was also 100% sure where another 1933 double eagle was located. That statement caught the attention of Paul Gilkes editor of Coin World who attended Greg's lecture at the PAN Spring show banquet Thursday evening. Paul contacted Greg the following week to inquire why he is so sure of the referenced coin's whereabouts. Greg informed him that it is housed in Fort Knox, KY with the ten Langbord specimens and was turned in by an anonymous collector.

How did PAN swing this lecture? PAN President Tom Uram asked Greg if he would be willing to attend our show and present a lecture about the litigation involved in this fascinating case. Greg said he would look into the possibility. After various approvals and clearances the arrangements were made. The U.S. Mint police brought two of the Langbord specimens to our coin show and our banquet for public display. Many lined up to have a look at these rarities. We extend sincere thanks to the many people involved to make this rare interesting incite of these legendary coins and their display possible!

John Mercanti Sculpture Part of ANA Silent Auction

The American Numismatic Association will conduct a silent auction in conjunction with the World's Fair of Money in Philadelphia next week. The 127th Anniversary ANA Awards Banquet & Silent Auction begins at 7 p.m. with a cocktail hour and silent auction viewing at the Philadelphia Marriott Downtown on Friday evening August 17th.

Retired 12th Chief engraver John Mercanti's latest sculpture "His Rendition of Liberty" is a hand-signed original sculpt that will be one of the featured items of the silent auction with the proceeds benefiting the Robert Lecce Advanced Scholarship Program.

The popular ANA silent auctions have been a marvelous chance to bid and own some great numismatic items. How very fitting that the home city of the U.S. Mint is the setting for one of John's latest works. His eagle design on the American Silver Eagle silver coins are world-renowned. Many collectors worldwide have followed John's Perth Mint Wedged Tailed Eagle designs. Mr. Mercanti seems to be as busy in retirement as he was during his chief engraver days at the mint.

We are told that John's granddaughter modeled for this beautiful rendition of Lady Liberty. This is a good opportunity to own something personally special to John Mercanti and know that the monies went to a very worthy cause.

The 2018 ANA official convention medals are designed by Jamie Franki and sculpted by noted medallist artist Heidi Westweert. This beautiful medal presents a beautiful rendition of Pennsylvania founder William Penn. The reverse is equally beautiful with a design loaded with wonderful symbolism featuring the City of Brotherly Love, the melodic heart shaped leaves, the all seeing eye of God on humanity as used in our nation's great seal, along with a splash of Greek to keep us cultured. Jamie's ¾ facing Jefferson nickel is currently used on our nation's coinage. He has also done presentations at our past PAN coin shows.

Obverse: William Penn; English real estate entrepreneur, philosopher, early Quaker, and founder of the British North American colony the Province of Pennsylvania.

Reverse: A Love Token for Philadelphia and Numismatics, featuring engraved elements from American paper currency that form a heart shape, which serves to frame the word Love.

Medals are available as a convention medal badge (1.5" bronze medal with a ribbon drape) $20; Bronze Medal (2.75") $65; or as a two-medal (1.5" bronze medal and 1.5" .999 FS medal, numbered) set for $100. They can be purchased at the ANA area (booth #99) at the show.

The PAN Fall Lecture series is shaping up to be another good one. We may have one more speaker to add but will be able to confirm after the ANA World's Fair of Money show ends next week.
